

Littering such a selfish act

You can't litter in a public place without being fined. It's a selfish act, says the council, and it's a crime. The council says that littering is a crime and that anyone who is caught littering can be fined up to €100. The council says that littering is a crime and that anyone who is caught littering can be fined up to €100.

Picture Diary

PEDAL POWER: Jill Moore, five, from Rochestown in Cork, outside the two homes which are to be sold to raise more than €1million for a specialised isolation Cystic Fibrosis unit at Cork University Hospital. The houses in Castleisland, Co. Kerry, were built, decorated and furnished by materials and furniture donated to the cause and by services provided voluntarily, as part of a joint initiative by the Cork and Kerry branches of The Cystic Fibrosis Association of Ireland.

Picture: Brian Loughheed